

2#

ΤΗΣ ΒΩΒΛΟΥ ΛΑΜΠΡΟΝ

CONTENIT

● van Zyl; collector of survivors, hardened veteran of chemistry	2
● Learners Ed 101	5
● Dogwater Book Summaries	7
● Wait... That's BS!	9
● The Great Wall of Awkward Silence	11
● Whispers	12
Study Collage	16

*For those affiliated with brainrot, here are the symbols which recommend which articles not to read based on scale of attention span needed

- No attention span needed
- Moderate attention span needed
- Just don't read

He watches the troops willingly throw themselves at the enemy... such poor souls

COLLECTING SURVIVORS

V<sup>23</sup>
Van Zyj

Teaching Chem

The master who teaches the troops how to discern Mustard Gas

I really hate the word, but Mr van Zyl is an undoubtedly ‘sigma’ teacher – each one of his lessons is a bittersweet blend of depressive humour, wry emotional support and content density. Van Zyl has been a cultural icon of PSS longer than I’ve attended; a figure of legend to the lower classes, but a terrifying reality to the 11’s and 12’s. He’s also the only teacher on management that would let me interview him.

If I start a study group in TikTok for chemistry would I get extra credit if it went viral?

Yes, but only if it is funny

Would you rather fight one hundred duck sized pop quizzes or one pop quiz moles of cyanide?

Very Funny. I'll take the one, because it is less than a 100.

The lifecycle of a chemistry teacher

Following high school, van Zyl went straight into his bachelor’s and then master’s at the University of the Free State. His B.Sc was in ‘Botany’ and honours in ‘Molecular Biology’, after which he pursued an M.Sc ‘Molecular Plant Physiology’. He stayed at the University until 2006, after which he jumped ship and began teaching. Van Zyl went full circle, beginning his teaching career at his former high school “Grey College”. He eventually moved to Swakopmund and PSS in 2014.

Going into the thick of it

As a warm-up, why are you here, sir?

Well, I'm here because I like working with students - I like education, transferring knowledge. Why Swakopmund? That's a long story.

So, what's with the “Mr van Zyl worksheets”?

It's all about repetition. If you repeat things over and over, you tend to get it eventually, and you also realise what questions to ask. I started that about 24 years ago. After counting my A-Level Worksheets for the year, they came out to around 250 pages. The AS worksheets will probably be about 400 to 500. (interviewer gasps, terrified)

Will we survive chemistry?

Yes you will! Every one of you. You may lose a limb or a finger here and there, but you'll make it in the end.

What made you go into teaching?

You know what? I was busy researching after getting my master's, some research in molecular biology, but it started to feel meaningless. I enjoyed parts of it, especially doing practicals with honours and third-year students, so I decided to make the switch to teaching.

*The real reason that I made the switch, though, was because I wanted to get married. I thought I'd teach and do my PhD on the side. That didn't really work out, though. I just couldn't get back into research (not for lack of bursaries, though *laughs wryly*).*

The reason for me teaching was pressed upon my heart by a quote and a calling - 'A life not lived for others is not a life worth living' - A. Einstein

What does the future look like for you?

There's always a bit of uncertainty - uncertainty and hence, backup plans – diversifying the teachers in the school. I would like to go into some teacher training at a later stage, though.

You do plan on teaching for the foreseeable future, though?

I do see that, unless something drastic changes. In my last school, for example, everything was great, then a big change suddenly happened one October, and I was on my way to Swakop by November – things happen very quickly in my life.

Why are you leaving the Grade 11 Classes?

The big thing is that there are just too many classes at this stage, between the A-Levels and the AS classes, that are split in two because of their size. Otherwise, it's also for backup: what happens if a bus drives over me? What then? It's important that there's someone who can take over from me if something were to happen.

Questions: Organic Difficulty

How do you define success on a personal level?

Mmm..., I link success to kindness, and to people feeling secure around me. If people are able to feel secure around me, when they can see me as kind and open: that's my picture of success.

We've actually had similar responses from a lot of teachers.

I think it is a teacher thing, actually. If anything, it is a PSS-specific thing. Although I've only taught at two schools, I've been involved with many others. PSS is unique in that it probably has the greatest share of 'overqualified' teachers: teachers who come from different academic or other backgrounds and could easily work somewhere else. This means that the teachers here are usually very driven, drawn to teaching for a specific purpose.

In your view, what are the defining qualities of a good teacher?

It's all about gaining the respect of your students, establishing respect in both directions. When you've lost the respect of your students, you have lost them. They simply won't learn anything from you.

Drive

Learners Ed 101

Let's face it: every day we're getting older, and every day we have to start considering the aspects that will permanently affect our lives, and one of those things is our driving licences. We are raised with the knowledge that one day, at eighteen, we will have to be prepared to go out and do our driving test – but so many of the technicalities are left unexplained until the very moment we need them.

That is where this article comes in! An efficient and relatively detailed text written for your convenience to help you understand the process, receive advice on where to start or gather the courage to try again, and maybe to reflect in satisfaction that you have already accomplished this part of life.

The Basics:

What is a learner's? It is basically a document that allows you to drive legally while being supervised by a licensed driver, you will get in trouble if you drive without a guardian. The driver's is then the actual card that allows you to drive freely.

So where to begin? Well firstly you will apply for a learners at NaTis, located on Henties Bay Road just across the state hospital (Swakopmund: 064 426 300). Here they offer motor vehicle licences, different road types to test vehicles, and of course – learner's and driver's licences. The test for the learners is a written exam that tests you on traffic signs, rules and general laws and theory you must abide by while driving. You have to be 17+, arrive early (it's always super busy, so try arriving early, first come – first served), bring a certified ID and pay a N$45 fee. You must achieve 80% or higher in order to pass. You then need an additional N$50 to pay to pick up and receive your learner's.

Prepping for your learner's:

After interviewing several students, there were overlapping answers. A few did reference the learner's manual, but many admitted that this was not their preferred method of study. Instead, they took to doing online mock quizzes to get constant feedback on their knowledge of the subject. One response stated that there were exams leaked to the public, and that the set amount of questions from three different exam papers are merely shuffled around, so in theory – all they had to do was study the leaked papers. (Please do actually study properly and not just to pass the exam – you might get fined or worse later on if you fail to abide by the rules properly.)

Students generally stated that it is up to the person, how much effort they believe they would like to put into this process.

Some started preparing the same day they applied, and only then had a few set days before their test, in which case quizzes and past papers are the most effective for time-efficient learning. Others allowed themselves more patience and preferred to properly section through the book and process its content - but they are the minority.

It is not uncommon to pass on your first attempt, and if you have, what great news for you! However, it is more often the case where your initial result is not over the required 80%, and you have to try again.

Sometimes you get it on the second try, sometimes only by the fourth, but the concept is the same: eventually, you will pass, and that will be worth it - right?

Generally, when asked upon whether or not the process is really worth it, the responses were positive - whether they were motivated by being able to drive their friends and shopping bags around, or simply for the privilege of long-term convenience in their life, everyone stated that it is worth the trouble.

Exam Day:

Now, if you are decently motivated for this, perhaps you would like to know what it might be like on the day of your test. The exam process starts immediately at your designated time. You and the rest of the individuals in your group - usually about ten people - are called in and asked to stand in a row.

Each person is referenced by name to approach the person/s conducting the exam, provide them with your relevant papers (a completed and approved application form, a certified copy of your ID) and take a seat by the desk in front. They are likely to snap a photo of you for ID purposes before you are permitted to go and take a seat.

Once everyone is seated, the test papers are handed out. You are instructed to cross out the sections you are not writing (i.e. motorcycle license) before you start. You have an hour to complete the paper.

Eventually you will come to pass this test, you will have your learners and you will be able to start practising with a vehicle. It is required for you to understand and learn to drive a car that is not automatic (manual), and many students advise to start with a smaller car.

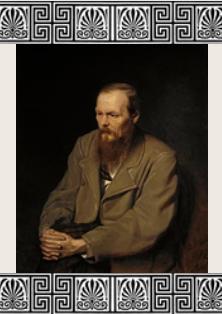

What has been reportedly difficult later on in the drivers was parallel parking, pulling away while switching gears and learning to master the clutch. At the end of the day, this is something everyone eventually must face, and hopefully you have been able to get a better idea on the process and how you would like to approach overcoming it.

DOGWATER BOOK SUMMARIES

FYODOR DOSTOEVSKY
ФЕДОР ДОСТОЕВСКИЙ

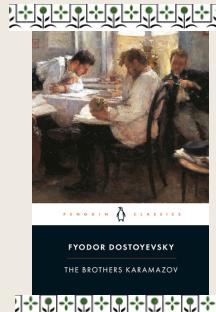

One of the most prolific authors of world history, Dostoevsky's works have been known for their exploration of profound psychological and philosophical themes. His books dissect the complexities of human nature, being particularly brilliant for his portrayal of his character's inner struggles and moral dilemmas. But like, who got time to read all that, huh? NOT YOU, so here are his best works summarised in a way that you can hear him complaining about it all the way from his grave in Russia.

A poor-ahh student named Raskolnikov who also had a raging superiority complex decided to actively help a pawnbroker pass away "for humanity's sake." Just to discover that guilt feels much less like noble philosophy and more like an intensely debilitating three-month tummy ache caused by Woermann chicken sandwiches, sprinkled with delirium, enigmatic confessions, and a detective who should've been paid more for his dedication.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT ^

There were three brothers; the wannabe monk, the sensualistic catastrophe, and the cynical intellectual (them Diogenes rip-offs), these chaps navigate faith, lust, and intense daddy issues all while trying to figure out who the hell murdered their revolting father (spoiler, literally everyone had a reason, but it was the family's servant who un-alived the guy).

THE BROTHERS KARAMAZOV ^

An unnamed, salty ex-civil servant writes a long, yapping monologue from his basement about why society is stupid, how people are hypocrites, and free will is the bane of existence - essentially the 19th-century Russian equivalent of a YouTube short with an AI generated voice reading rage-bait reddit threads.

NOTES FROM UNDERGROUND ^

THE IDIOT

Prince Myshkin, a saintly guy with the amicability of an overly-friendly grandma that force feeds you biscuits, returns to Russia and attempts to bring kindness to the morally bankrupt society. Except, he accidentally triggers romantic anarchy, jealousy, and tragedy because he is mistaken for a lunatic, proving that being too nice is not the meta strat in Russian literature.

DEMONS

A lil Russian town becomes the petri dish for political extremism when a gang of revolutionaries who can't decide if they want to change the world or just gossip vivaciously spiral into conspiracy, homicides, and existential arguments that could've been avoided if they just locked in and had one good group therapy session.

THE GAMBLER

A young simp falls in love with his employer's stepdaughter. He attempts to rizz her by winning big at roulette, but instead becomes so addicted to gambling that he practically speedran to financial ruin, all while watching all the other characters make equally terrible life decisions in the equivalent of a European Las Vegas.

THE DOUBLE

A submissive government clerk slowly begins becoming extremely delulu on reality when a far more charming and confident version of himself appears, stealing the remnants of his social life, and all together generally behaving like his evil twin, except the "evil" part might just be "not rotting in his mother's basement," and actually touching grass.

POOR FOLK

Two financially struggling friends exchange letters about their sad, shoddy, lamentable, depressing and miserable lives. Sharing about romantic rejections, childhood trauma and being very depresso-expresso, proving that 19th-century pen pals were basically early social media trauma dumpers, just with more metaphors and fewer cat pictures or sigma language.

WAIT...! THAT'S BS!

Hold your horses

Have you ever been in an argument or heard someone make a bold claim, then had a knee-jerk reaction, thinking "Wait, that's BS!", except, you weren't able to properly identify what made this claim disingenuous or logically invalid? Often it's no easy task, and so, here at The West Coast Lampoon we're going to arm you with the skills to substantiate your claim, to assert that that guy is talking BS!!

Spot the causal fallacy!

One of the most common logical errors when making a point is the causal fallacy. Simply, it's when a person provides two statistics, both having changed (increased or decreased), and arguing that they are therefore related. The key thing with this fallacy, is that it does not provide a causal link (a relationship between two things where one directly causes the other).

Here's an example:
In the summer of 2023 in San Diego, deaths by shark attack went up by 18%, at the same time, ice cream sales went up by around 25%, one may argue - "Sharks can smell the xylitol sugar on your tongue after you've had ice cream!" claiming a causal relationship between these two statistics; what's much more likely, however, is that both statistics increase in the summer, since more people are on the beach!

Fact check, Seriously!

Just because someone says it in a serious tone or in a persuasive context does NOT mean it's reliable. A clear example is the paragraph above – I made up those statistics and xylitol isn't even a sugar. Just because someone says something doesn't mean you have to accept it as it is, do research, google stuff, look for research papers and videos! Seriously! Data often contradicts what one might assume (e.g, smarter people are actually more likely to give into confirmation bias [I did not make that one up, google it]). Never assume someone's statement is true just because it 'sounds right'; literally just google-debunk it!

Circular Reasoning!

This is a sneaky one, but it's by far the most common tactic used in poor arguments, it's when the conclusion is baked into the premise. Here's an example.

"We do it this way because that's how it should be done" this statement, on its own, offers no evidence to what's being said. Whenever someone makes a claim, be careful to make sure their evidence isn't just a sneaky rewording of the claim itself.

The Owl of Athena is a historical symbol that embodied the core values of Athens; erudition, wisdom and strategic thinking.

The appeals!

A quick speedrun - appeal to nature - “It's natural therefore it is good”; there are plenty of instances of natural bad things (diseases) and unnatural good things (medicinal drugs), just because its found in nature or its how we used to live in nature does not make it better, you need to provide evidence that it is better.

Appeal to authority - “This guy said it, and he has a PhD” if your only reason for believing something is a single qualified person said it, then your belief in it is weak. The fact is you need more than a single agreement from a person in a high position to validate your beliefs, this doesn't mean authority is a useless source, it just can't be your only one.

Appeal to tradition - “We've always done it this way, so this is how it should always be done” needless to say if we stuck by that principle we would still be stoning women for being able to read.

The Oracle of Delphi - A religious site intended to provide prophecies for those who seek it.

The best tactic; The Socratic question

(Stemming from Socrates famous method of questioning, known as the Socratic Method)

Simply ask the other person “What do they mean by x”, sometimes you don't need to argue on another person's terms, sometimes you already agree on a point, but disagree on definitions. In the end, the easiest way to unravel a conflict is to be clear about terminology.

And now you know what to do to debunk B.S, proud of you.

The Great Wall of Awkward Silence

Gideon Nuseb

I'm 15 already and strange things have been happening to my body: hair growing in weird places; I've grown taller since last summer. My confidence seems to fly like an eagle, since my dad shared the art of hunting with me. I feel like a predator, tracking my prey by their scent and fear. My senses are heightened, I have cracked out of my cocoon, life is effortless. Except for one thing. The single brick wall towering before me: I can't talk to her.

I crumble and collapse whenever Nicole's around. I don't know why, but it's killing me.

We have both changed over the summer: I'd say that we've transitioned from running around with snot in our noses to pretty mature individuals. We don't talk that often anymore; she seems to have grown distant from me. I can't help wondering: is she avoiding me, or is puberty playing games with me?

I started to notice small details about her appearance. She styles her hair in curly bobs instead of pigtails, she wears more plain clothes and she walks with this relaxed and fluid posture, her hips gently swaying.

I seem to like these new changes. I want to court her, but how will I approach her? Every time that we're together, there's a crater keeping us apart. What will she say, or think, will my ambitions taint our relationship? Does she have the same thoughts as I do, she might be thinking about me, she could be playing effeuiler la marguerite with the pink tulips in her garden. Maybe I get lucky and the petals are odd.

Should I use my dad's cologne to silently woo her, but where's the fun in that? If I could just express how I feel, but it's just another "if", followed by all this uncertainty. It's standing on the edge of a diving board, heart pounding, knowing one leap could either be a perfect dive or a spectacular flop, but yet, stepping forward anyway. Will I let this be a death note mailed to my doorstep or will I disappear into the thin air.

I fear all I can do is lock my intentions up, never to see the sun again. What's the worst that could happen or what's the best that could happen - will there be a fairy-tale ending, all sunshine and rainbows?

There is only one way to find out: I've got to try.

The sun will rise in the west and set in the east after I have sunken my fangs into my prey. Terra will bow before me, my cup will overflow with pride.

My shell will be broken by my brimming confidence.

The order will return to the way it is meant to be.

Tea & Gossip

SERVED TO YOU ON A GOLDEN PLATTER

"GOSSIP GOES AROUND LIKE SNAKES IN A CAGE, BUT HERE
THE SNAKES ARE FRIENDLY, AND THEY INVITE YOU TO TALK
WITH THEM..."

NOW WITH A BIT MORE SOLEMNITY

Q : What is an "unc-status core" hobby of yours?

A : "Edging"

"I knit, sometimes."

"baking, probably"

"Baking"

"chatting with the senior citizens"

"Dark magic"

"Fraustball auf die Eins and drinking beer"

"Beeding"

"Bro the moment the clock hits 9pm i'm gone, mimimimimimi. Grandpa core style"

"Taking afternoon naps"

"Gardening and speaking to the plants"

"Reading the newspaper with Allessandro"

"Sit and watch birds and nature"

"walking to the beach"

"I like gazing at the stars :>"

"Scrap booking..."

"Staring at my ceiling"

"Talking to my freshly baked loaves of bread"

"Painting baroque with oil paints, its so time consuming you can surmise only some affluent old rich individual doing it because they got all that free time"

"Reading, everyone's so attached to their phones nowadays, I feel like a granny whenever I pull out a good novel to read."

"Listening to people's stories"

"Drinking tea out of fine china"

Q : When was a time you acted nonchalant, but were going crazy inside?

A : "One time my father called me and I thought it was my partner and I answered with a very freaky 'Grrrrr Rawrrrr'"

"When I had to present my project in front of my class"

"everyday in german class (PLEASE HELP)"

"Any time I had German class"

"When Ayden (Gr11) walked past me with his new haircut"

"When mr ngandu put all our Marks on the screen by accident"

"When miguel touched me"

"When Dominic walked passed me, I went crazy in love - Miguel"

"When my crush was flirting like crazy with me. Those eyes were mingling"

"When mister Malan hands out the 4th worksheet of the week"

"When my knee popped out of its socket, I didn't cry in front of the people that helped me only in the car."

"Every day of my life"

"many many times when I got hit by a ball at sports"

"When Mr van Zyl asks me a question I don't know the answer to and the only thing comes to mind is 'queen don't cry'"

"Unfortunately I don't have a single nonchalant bone in my body, so when I go crazy inside, it'll definitely show"

"When the guy I liked told me who he liked'

"When I thought 'that was an easy math test' - I got 22% while everyone else was celebrating BECAUSE it was an easy test, I was just a failure."

"Whenever my dear pookie lets her hair down"

"The time when I finally met someone that matched my freak"

Q • What is an embarrassing memory that haunts and cringes you at night?

A : "When I made a joke in geo and no one laughed"

"So like my waist is lowkey real sensitive and I was standing in the kitchen being snorlax and my mother grabbed me by my waist and shoved me away, but when she grabbed my waist I groaned SO LOUDLY BECAUSE MY POOKIE LIKES TO GRAB ME THERE."

"When I fell down the stairs"

"when i asked the wrong person out thinking they were someone else"

"Cringe is afraid of me not the other way around"

"When Natalie from gr 12 rejected me"

"When I vomited on my crush as she gave me a hug"

"When I tripped on the stairs 3 times, while my crush was behind me"

"When I nearly washed my crush's dishes on the gr 9 camp just because he didn't want to do it."

"Falling off a cliff."

After writing poetry I was proud off, I showed it to my friend and all she did was stare disgusted at me.

"Halfway through info-dumping on someone, I realised they didn't care and nearly died of self-inflicted cringe."

"When I was in like grade 8 I had to do a presentation and I literally only used complicated words to impress everyone, no one gave a darn."

"Falling off a horse in front of strangers"

"when I pooped myself in elementary and had to pretend as if it was not me with the stinky smell"

"The only time I begged for something, bro im never hovelling ever again :("

"I tried haggling something from a merchant in Rome and was trying to speak Italian, but apparently I must've said something funny, but ill never know."

Q • If you play videogames, which one is your favourite and why?

A : "roblox, i'm an ipad kid at heart"

"Dress to impress"

"DTI"

"DTI"

"dti"

"Roblox cuz I like playing with friends"

"roblox-chuckecheese 2. it is so funny when playing with friends"

"Doors (roblox)"

"Grow a garden (gambling w seed packs)"

"The Casino"

"Genshin (LES GO GAMBLINGGGGG!!! AWW DANG IT). music is eargasmic dough."

"Solitaire"

"Russian Roulette"

"Minecraft"

"Brawlstara"

"Tetris because it soothes me"

"Fallout 3, because of its storyline and it being way before its time"

"Horror games, I like the fear and suspense"

"Granny (she kinda...)"

"Baldy's basics"

"Plague Inc"

"The Secret of Mana"

"fortnite , it is stress relieving"

"Civilisation 6 - the stress relief of detonating a thermonuclear device onto your enemy's capital is unmatched."

"Sims4, I love making lives I can only dream off"

"Stardew."

"Valorant"

DQ • What incident in your life altered your perspective of living in general?

A : "Having a father"

"When I found out I was going to be an older sister."

"discovering the word sonder"

"being friendzoned"

"Falling in love"

"When this blonde girl humbled me"

"The good God does"

"When I pooped my pants and everyone ews kind about it. It's not as embarrassing as you think"

"Going to a country outside of Africa"

"People's shallowness"

When a kid in my class said that rape is the victim's fault...

A 3 minute voice message broke my concept of reality

Being nice to people doesn't always make them reciprocate.

The first time someone stood up for me.

When this brown eyed brunette in grade 10 rejected me

Seeing a homeless person that was rude to people grade 7

the death of my older sister

When I realised some people are just really that cruel within.

When I was forcibly sent to a therapist

I find it somewhat pretentious to think that you could effectively raise children in the first place - there's such an enormous risk, and it's guaranteed that you won't do it perfectly. Perhaps just not have them?

I would let him free ball and not wear any diapers

Not threaten my kids anytime they cry about anything that happened in life probably letting my children go outside and play with other children

i don't want children, but if i get any, i'd let them make mistakes without getting a lecture everytime

Not carrying on that generational trauma, goodness gracious its a real piece of work.

DQ : If you could go back in time to prevent your parents from ever meeting, and thus making you disappear, however exponentially boosting your parents quality of life, would you?

A : "Yes"
Absolutely not. I think I made their relationship much stronger.

definitely, they both deserve better

maybe

No I would not. Me being born gave them a purpose to life

It's in human nature to act selfishly so what do you think

No im too important

I'm not the issue there...

No, their life's are perfect because of me

Hell yes!

If I knew that they'd have more of an impact on the world than I could, probably. I kinda enjoy living, though.

Yes

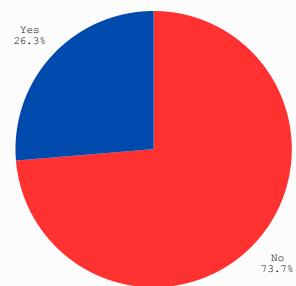

No, I love mommy
Hell yeah

no because i would not want my parents to NOT meet each other; they are literally soulmates

nah, i'm the best part of their lives

Poles

Q : There sits a button in front of you, press it - and there will be a 99.9% chance of you getting 1 billion dollars, but a 0.1% chance of you getting yeeted into space, blinded, paralysed, fully muted, deaf and unable to die. You will simply drift through space for the rest of eternity, you'll witness the heat death of the universe and still just drift... forever. Would you press it?

DQ : When you raise your children, what would you do differently from when your parents raised you. If so, what would you do?

A : "Saying I love you"

Punish with kindness and love and handle them with respect

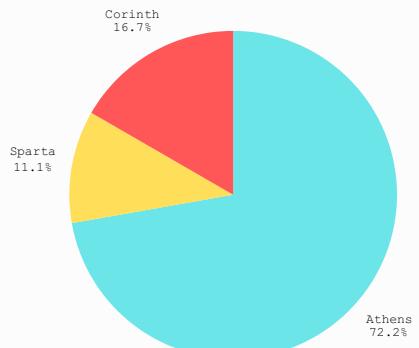

Kick them out at 18

I would not be an alcoholic

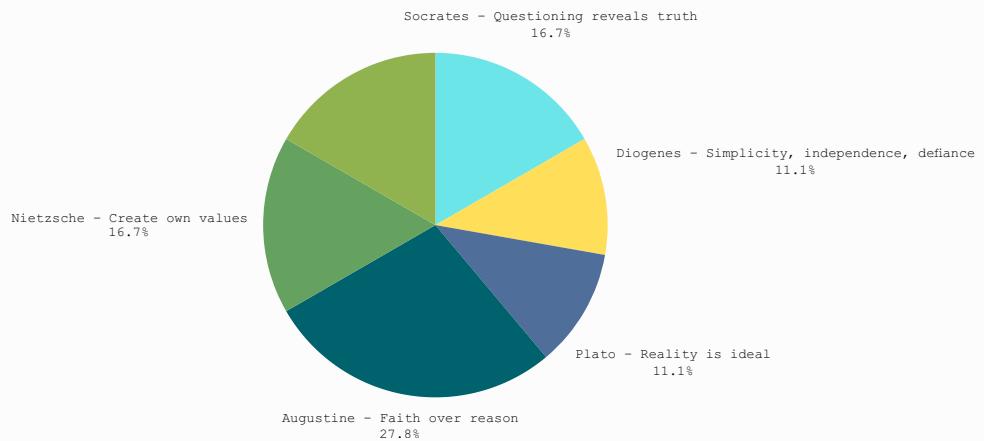

I would speak life (tell me their beautiful and smart) over them rather than death (saying their ugly or an accident)

I would give them more freedom

Q : If you were to be transported back to Ancient Greece, would you choose to live in the brawn and glory seeking Sparta, the knowledgeable and science faring Athens or the money chasing and thalassocratic (boat empire) Corinth?

Q : Which philosopher and their philosophy resonates with you the most?

Q : Which teacher would survive being a horror movie protagonist?

Q : Which subject do you think needs the most 'reworking'?

Study Resources

-Ayden Herbst and friends

This is my personal collection of banger notes, clutch websites, beautiful textbooks and all-around high-quality study resources.

If you have any essential resources that you think we've missed, you can send 'em in to: lackingregard@gmail.com.

Disclaimer: Over-reliance on these tools may increase your average by  $9.81 \times 10^{69\%}$ .

AS & A Level

• Notes:

Physics - AS Physics:

(https://drive.google.com/drive/folders/1of-iNRwKLpFmxduvR6jK8QmZyEBx\_Aro?usp=drive\_link)

Mojza: (<https://mojza.org/mojza-as-physics/>)

Chemistry - AS Chem:

(https://drive.google.com/drive/folders/12mjG8Rk8LD3hwShCfF-bxYfc-PycsSha?usp=drive\_link)

Mozja: (<https://mojza.org/mojza-as-chemistry-notes/>)

Biology - AS Biology:

(https://drive.google.com/drive/folders/1rEVDVGRtndTF61NE2IhsDfE9iYOso3A?usp=drive\_link)

Computer Science:

Haoron Jie (<https://haoran-jie.github.io/>)

Mathematics: SMYL:

(<https://gcealevelmaths9709.com/category/as-level/pure-1/>)

• Papers:

OpenPastPaper (Math, Chem, Phys, Bio) -

(<https://app.openpastpaper.com/>)

Cambridge Papers (Math) -

(<https://cambridgepapers.net/subject-wise-paper>)

level=2&subject=1&paper=1)

Past Paper Penguin (Math) -

(<https://pastpaperpenguin.com/>)

Solved:

Past Paper Penguin -

(<https://pastpaperpenguin.com/>)

Early Papers

• XtremePapers (lovely russian site) - (<https://xtremepape.rs/>)

Crack A Level

(<https://crackalevel.wordpress.com/>)

Textbooks 📚:

Z-Library (<https://z-library.sk/>)

Ayden's Google Drive (<https://drive.google.com/open?id=1PyR8ZI4d61T7WXRN9qNIetfufOHo9C0h>)
(new stuff added as we go)

The Library of Alexandria

The West Coast Lampoon

Wowee, look at that, 2nd edition already done.

We hope it made your day a little sillier and a sprinkled a bit of whimsy atop it.

Titanic-saurus thanks to the team, Mr van Zyl and Mrs de Voss, and THANK you for reading. hehe.

Stay breezy y' all.

